

Acknowledgements

I want to thank a lot of people who helped me with this book, but I want to start with my editor and friend Chris Intagliata – a fine writer in her own right -- who helped me in too many ways to enumerate. I want to thank my agent, Regina Ryan, and all of the wonderful people at Kaplan Publishing who worked with me to make this happen – most especially my editor there, Shannon Berning.

I also want to acknowledge my colleagues and fellow teachers at the National Criminal Defense College who have encouraged me in so many ways, my present and former colleagues in the criminal defense bar – especially at the public defender’s office, and my colleagues where I am privileged to teach, the DePaul University College of Law.

I want to also acknowledge my family – for their support in spite of their occasional misgivings, of my chosen work. My daughter Samantha and my son Will I thank you both for understanding the long hours and the worry and occasional obsessive behavior. And my husband Arnie, thanks for putting up with me typing away in the car when we were supposed to be on vacation, and for always listening and understanding that this is not just what I do, but who I am.